Dear John:

Thanks for your note of November 2. I have been reviewing the manuscript one last time to clean up minor details of cross references, etc. This is now almost completed.

I am dispatching the first six chapters to the Yale Press today and the balance will follow within a week or two. Everything is in except a final revision of Samuelson's chapter which should be in in a few days and the final revised version of Lenhart's roundtable report which you will have in a couple of weeks.

By all means give me a ring the next time you are in Washington. I keep in touch with Yale in a general way by cross-examining Dick Ruggles when he is here, but I would like to get a first-hand account of how the rest of you are doing.

How does it feel to be a collectivist? I guess I got out just in time.

Yours,

/s/
